Instagram template powerpoint for students

So many of you liked my Instagram Post Model, that I thought I'd give it a little update. I created a brand new template to match the newest version of Instagram. I've included the template for an Instagram post, as well as two different templates for an Instagram profile page. Here are some images of the new template: There are 6 different slide layouts for you. A blank each of the post with both profiles and then one of each with instructions on the sides. As this: If you go up to the Layout button across the top, you can choose from all six layout: You can see the template by clicking here. If you would like to use it, click the Blue Button Use Template button and it will make a copy for you. You can see my original post on how to use a template like this in the classroom by clicking here. stock, share, chart, financial, internet, digital, network, mobile, computer, keyboard, laptop, social media, icon, application, facebook, twitter, industry, model, ppt, powerpoint, googleide, google sliding, unlocked themes, infographic, layout, graphs, diagrams, presentations, ppt templates, ppt wallpaper, slide format, slide, ppt backg around, free social media marketing templates are PowerPoint tools for business marketing presentations and social concept presentations. His model was in ActivInspire and I brought it on to Google Slides. There are a few ways you can use this template: Make students create an Instagram of a famous millionaire. Create an Instagram picture of a book character. Students can create a historic selfie by inserting the pictures of historical pictures. What are some ways you can use it in your classroom? Category: 2nd Grade, 3rd grade, 4th grade, 5th grade, Google Drive / Engage your students with this fake Instagram Fake Instagram template in Google Slide from Carly Black. Back in 32 episodes of the Shaking Learning Show. I interviewed Lisa Johnson. Lisa shared a fake Instagram model she created in Keynote. I knew the one listening to google-lovers would create one for Google Slides. Carly Black in the rescue!! Carly not only the model, but has also applied it to her classroom and shares her story in the guest post below. Carly was also introduced to an On-Air Coaching Episode of The Shake Up Learning Show. It's my favorite trained episodes! Post guests by Carly Black Leveraging social media teaching students were a huge win for me in the classroom. Several teachers recently reported on morning students I shared with afternoon students, Miss Black let us use Snapchat today! Serious! Our assignment was on Snapchat! Of course, they're referring to the day I taught them how to create booksnaps. I am forever grateful that Tara Martin has taught us all how to annotate texts via social media. Imagine your mini-lesson about text annotation: You share a slide presentation to the students' market in the steps and examples. Some handfull and some notes are taken. Students look you prolaxy on the documentary camera then try it on their own in a story printed and printed with some color pen. Does this sound familiar? Make sure it's a visually appealing show, and perhaps the passages are funny, but imagine telling the children they need cell phones today. Then the ads will use Snapchat. It brings a whole new dynamic! They sit and listen. Finding ways to bring the world into the classroom for the sneaky reasons of learning will get you through that goal ending every time. Of course, there was that an activity, a strong Facebook profile of a book character, which fell flat. When they got the hand, a student quickly shared that they didn't know what Facebook looked like because it was for old people. While I didn't feel that old, I also realized that lesson I needed an upgrade. This experience made me jump through more of what the kids are doing these days. I was hesitant to join social media beyond Facebook at the time. But once I joined Twitter and Instagram, a world of collaboration with teachers around the world came into view. I had no idea the teachers were sharing and collaborating on social media. I was completely blind to the Professional Learning Networks that were available to me. This is where I found Kasey and Podcast of Google Faculty. This PLN of active and engaged educators was one of the most inspirational places for me to gain knowledge and ideas of my honey craft as an educator. Kasey's Episode 32 of The Shake Up Podcast with Lisa Johnson introduced me to the amazing materials and ideas shared on her website, Tech Chef 4 Lisa spoke about a fake Instagram model she created in Keynote but didn't calculate how to make it into Google Slides. The distributing was perfect; I was mulling over this exact idea for a future class project that students could create in order to share their independent reading. After taking a look at Lisa's example, she gave me the idea I needed to make it happen. Storytelling and fake Instagram Instagram is all about telling stories. I wanted to increase that and show students how they could share their independent reading through an Instagram account. Students begin by choosing the protagonist or antagonist. Inventory a profile for this character requires thinking about what characters may have to say about themselves. Finish it off with a persuasive profile picture, write an on-mark tagline, add a few hashtags, and include the character's name with a handle. When looking at an Instagram profile, there are story circles and then the image square representing a reverse-chronological timeline. The profile page is the first page of the Instagram Slide deck Instagram. It includes biographic and nine square information to represent nine of the most important events. As directive for nine images, I thought it would help students think through the plotline. Put two in the display; this should show which characters are and the setting of the stories. The next four should include the incident, which introduces the conflict and then three of the most important scenes from the rising action. Identifies the biggest point and an event, each of the action's collapse and the resolution. Once the students have map out their stories based on these key points, they select the images they represent. With the built-in Unsplash add-on, inserting pictures is super easy. Students can also scene in their own photos if they want a specific look. The images are only part of this project. Students need to also write captions and relevant comments. They create handles for other characters and comments and the character's voice demonstrate further analysis of the story. Don't forget the hashtags! These are another thoughtful way to incorporate elements of history. This project was a big hit! The kids enjoyed the social media aspect and were creative with their sleeves and hashtags. The laughs were at high volume the day we worked on those in the classroom. Even though it was an independent project, many asked neighbors or shared their creative, funny comments. Find the Fake Instagram template for Google Sliding Make a copy | Using Link Templates False Instagram Activity in other topics this activity is not just for language art. I was able to see math teachers using this for specific concepts like command of operations. Each step could be represented by an image, and the caption and comment could be addressed the personalized math. Science professors could use a fake Instagram account to show the steps or steps of an experience. Both topics, or any topic really, could require students to research someone more popular in their fields. The fake Instagram account could share their accomplishment and contributions in the field of study. If this sounds like a project you'd like to try out of your classroom, make a copy of your own Instagram template and give it a go. We would like to see what your students create or hear how the project worked for you. You can find me on Twitter and Instagram at TeachMomRepeat.
